Designer Doorware's Bullet+Stone Hardware Celebrates the Contrast of Concrete and Metal

Lever handles and knobs combine raw concrete with sumptuous metals into a striking, elegant collection suited to historic and modern aesthetics

(Beverly Hills, CA, March 7, 2019) Designer Doorware brings together two timeless classics—concrete and metal—in the Bullet+Stone collection of door hardware.

The handles and knobs merge the rough and cold aesthetic of reinforced concrete with sumptuous and eye-catching metals. The resulting visual and tactile experience allows users to observe both finishes simultaneously, amplifying and bringing to light the contrast between them.

Handcrafted with an artisanal concrete mixture specially formulated for durability, texture, and sustainability, Bullet+Stone pieces offer the variations of shade, color, and natural imperfections that define rough, exposed concrete. Each concrete form is backed with solid brass fittings in a handful of finishes ranging from Satin Black Chrome to Polished Nickel to Florentine Bronze in a medium or dark tone.

"The look and feel of concrete is enduring in architecture, and the Bullet+Stone collection offers an update on this timeless classic by melding the cool, raw material with warm, luxurious metals," explains Joseph Di Benedetto, Executive Director. "The resulting sculptural pieces allow designers and consumers to explore new realms of design."

The Bullet+Stone collection includes the Concrete Club lever handle, a relaxed take on modern silhouettes with fully rounded edges; the Concrete Quad lever handle, featuring straight, squared edges; and the Concrete Niki, a perfectly round knob.

The hardware's concealed fixing is suitable for all door thicknesses. The concrete comes standard in a Luna Grey finish; custom finishes are available upon request. Metals are available in all of Designer Doorware's special finishes.
