Modern interpretations of metals, concrete, and wood lend new twists on classic styles the rough and cold aesthetic of reinforced concrete with sumptuous and eye-catching metals. The resulting visual and tactile experience allows users to observe both finishes simultaneously, amplifying and bringing to light the contrast between them. Profiles include a fully rounded lever handle, squared lever handle, and a round, flat knob.

Kamen Collection

Featuring a knurling pattern across much of the surface, Kamen levers, knobs, and pulls merge industrial aesthetics with delicate craftsmanship, masculine proportions with sophisticated lines. The result is a versatile elegance ideal for classic and traditional interior styles. A delicate, detailed diamond knurling pattern creates highs and lows that play with light, creating a varied look from finish to finish.

Monte Timber Collection

Showcasing the warmth and organic beauty of wood, Monte Timber connects homeowners to nature at every touch. Sustainably sourced species include American white oak, a versatile, distinguishing grain, and American black walnut, known for its rich color and wavy grain. The two species come in either a raw or oiled finish.

Showcasing Classic Styles

During the show, Designer Doorware also will spotlight four of its distinctive style families, featuring a range of versatile shapes that help capture the personalities of each hardware collection.

Niki: Inspired by nautical portholes, these knobs feature a clean circular geometry that is playful yet elegant, becoming yet welcoming. Select a step-down perimeter or satin finish for added flair.

Club: A relaxed take on modern silhouettes, Club lever handles feature fully rounded edges suitable for a range of decors. Pair with a black finish for a Brutalist look or brass to complement 20th century designs.

Flinders: Simple and modern, these solid brass pulls emulate the distinctive cylindrical and tubular shapes of the steel tubing first explored in mid-1920s furniture design. The effect is both minimal and enduring.

Montana: Ideal for Mid-Century-Modern interiors, Montana pulls and lever handles blend soft transitions with sharp elevations for a design that is minimal and delightfully humble. The offerings reflect an increasing desire to remove complexity and clutter from our daily lives.
